

Wedding Bells

Only time would tell of the fate that day of a dutiful young man who drove away

To his regular dentist in a regular place for little did he know who would poke in his face

Yet ever polite and somber too he trembled in that chair as his face turned blue

'Til a lovely light filled that dental room as Robin Lee entered and reversed his doom

“What a lovely woman, this hygienist,” he thought as she smiled and laughed and talked non-stop

He was later surprised he lived through it all and his careful attendant clearly “had a ball”

“Hmm...hmm...” this seasoned sleuth thought...
“I wonder how it would feel to finally get caught...”

That night when Robin Lee came home from work
I just knew our daughter had gone berserk...

“Daddy, oh Daddy I met Randy today he's the man in my dreams for whom I pray!”

And she danced and giggled of the patient she gagged and in her vision he was already bagged

“Eternities later” our eager phone rang and Randy Lynn Sanders entered our lives with a bang

They've taken their time, with love godly and true
So, today with our blessing, we present them to you